With 20 years experience as a barrister, Louise has particular expertise in environment, planning and local government, real property and equitable claims, strata title law and building & construction disputes. She has acted for and against local councils, architects, farmers, developers, public interest groups, private certifiers and owners corporations in leading cases in the High Court of Australia and other superior courts and tribunals: see Heavens Door P/L v Hillpalm P/L and Wilkie v Blacktown City Council & Ors.

Her experience as a barrister is complemented by a two year stint as in-house counsel at the City of Sydney, conducting significant litigation, particularly in the enforcement of the Environmental Planning and Assessment Act 1979 (NSW) and related legislation, and providing complex legal advice to the Council in all aspects of local government, environment and planning law.
